Marcus Island, 1,190 miles southeast of Tokyo was heavily attacked Saturday and Sunday by a carrier-borne force, a Japanese broadcast disclosed today. The worried enemy, added Berlin radio, sounded air raid alarms throughout North and East Japan.

The broadcast was the first word of such a strike—first against Marcus since Sept. 1 last year—and recalled that the Japanese were the first to disclose last veals. week's carrier raid against

In last September's heavy raid 80 per cent of Marcus' military installations, according to Nimitz' estimate were destroyed. It worried Tokyo enough to force the broadcast admission then: "The enemy could have raided the mainland if he wanted x x."

Tokyo was approached from Still another direction, and much closer than Marcus Island. A Liberator bomber Thursday struck at Shimushiri, a Kurile island 400 miles from Nippon's main islands, thus achieving the closest approach yet of any landbased Allied plane to the enemy capital. Other airmen under Nimitz' command also bombed Marshall bases.

The most important land fighting of the Pacific war centered in the seemingly-imminent victory of Lt. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell over the enemy defending Myitkyina in Northern Burma. The Japanese were boxed in on three sides and appeared on the verge of collapse. Myitkyina is vital to control of the Burma Road.

AUSTIN, May 22.—(P)—The state Democratic executive committee today voted to recommend that former Gov. Dan Moody be called upon to be temporary cahirman of tomorrow's state convention, and also that in the interests of harmony, there be no keynote speech.

Bowle that the arrangements committee was attempting to cram its decision to hold the senate in the senate chamber was defeated when his motion repecting the arrangements committee's report was tabled.

Reasons for Capitol Meeting.

W. C. Richards of Athens told the committee that the decision to meet at the capitol rather than at Gregory gymnasium was made because of inadequate transportation facilities to the gymnasium "and there is no place to eat out there."

The executive committee voted that delegates should be shated first in the convention hah, and that if any room was left, visitors would be admitted.

The Red Cross

It won't be long now before we hear the familiar boyhood call, "Hey, Skinnay, c'mon in, the water's fine" advises the American Red Cross.

That will mean bathing beaches, the old swimming hole, and the seashore will attract thousands of people, and unless each knows what he is about, many will be headed for trouble, the Red Cross.

Because most aquatic accidents are preventable, the Red Cross water safety service offers times.

Because most aquatic accidents are preventable, the Red Cross water safety service offers timely suggestions in an effort to curb the number of persons—7,000—who, statistics say, will drown this year.

The American Red Cross advises—KNOW your swimming place.

INVESTIGATE it if you are not sure. SWIM at beaches and pools that are manned by lifeguards.

DON'T go swimming alone.

WAIT at least an hour after eating before going into the water.

DON'T plunge into cold water.

WADE in, slowly acclimating the body to the water's temperature.

DON'T overdo it. CONDITION yourself gradually, especially at the beginning of the season.

KNOW your swimming ability.

DON'T remain in the water too long. THIS results in uncontrollable shivering, cold and clammy skin, a blue tinge of the lips, and a drawn or pinched face.

DO your swimming at one stretch and then take your sunbath, in a dry suit, if possible, a little at a time until the body is conditioned.

Potatoes Should Be Allowed Mature Before Digging Victory gardeners should let potatees mature before digging them.

potatoes mature before digging them. Potatoes can be dug before the tops die, but they should be mature if they are to keep properly, states Eva Williams, Assistant Home Deminstration Agent. To check maturity, press the thumb against the skin of a few of the potatoes. If the skin is tough and these potatoes against the corp. potatoes. If the skin is tough and does not break easily, the crop may be harvested. In areas where excessive rainfall has occurred a short time before harvest, water blisters (small elevated white spots) are likely to form on the skin. Delay harvesting until the blisters have dried. If harvesting is done while the potatoes are blistery or sappy, heavy losses by rotting may occur.

Potatoes should not be handled like stacks of stovewood if they like stacks of stovewood if they are to keep. A turning plow or a middle buster run 8 to 10 inches deep may be used to dig the crop. Separate all skinned or bruised potatoes from the good ones. Use separate all skinned or bruised potatoes from the good ones. Use the skinned ones first. If storage conditions are right, the others will wait patiently for their turn on the table. Remember to handle them almost as carefully as you would an egg. As soon as the potatoes are dug, place them in the shade so they will not blister.

Storage Place.

A cool, well ventilated cellar is satisfactory for potato storage, says Miss Williams, provided it has an overhead vent that will allow the warm air and moisture to escape. The door and overhead vent should be opened at night and closed during the day to keep the interior cool. If outbuildings or the area under the fram hoten are to be used for storage pursers.

or the area under the fram hown are to be used for storage purposes, cross ventilation is essential. If exposed to light, potatoes will turn green which makes them undersirable for consumption. Avoid spreading the potatoes directly on the ground or floor. Provide a slatted false floor with at least four inches or air space. Even willow poles or hay on which the potatoes are spread will sllow the air to completely circle each potato. Ventillation picks up the moisture and keeps the notatoes dry, which tends to reduce rot.
